

Common Myths About Informational Writing

Informational/Nonfiction writing is . . .

- about uninteresting topics
- completely objective, without the writer's passion, opinion, or sense of humor
- without voice
- not written in first person
- written in a dull, formulaic unengaging way
- dense and difficult to understand the topic
- very long